

Greg Locke is owner and operator of Gotham Glassworks, a custom art-glass studio and proprietorship located in the historic village of Schomberg, Ontario, a scenic 45 minute drive north-west of Toronto in King Township. Greg has been producing his own unique style of stained glass artwork since 1996 including window panels, lamps, glass art platters, vessels and unique decorative elements. Greg's initial style in traditional copper foil and lead came methods incorporated what he terms "soft gothic" design elements, hinting at the strong colours and lines of the Gothic architecture and art era, "... but not so bold you would tire of it in your home, restaurant or office foyer". Greg's style has broadened in 14 years to incorporate a distinctive palate of unique flowing shapes and colours.

Gotham Glassworks moved to Schomberg in 2008 and Greg added fused glass (also called "warm glass") to his offering with the addition of a large glass kiln in 2008. Though he will continue to utilize traditional copper foil and leaded glass methods in his artwork, fused glass is now his predominant focus.

"Fusing offers much more opportunity to be creative and expand my offering of works to include objects and shapes I could never accomplish with foil or lead came. I am delighted by my transition to kiln-fired art!"

Be sure to check out Events on the Gotham Glassworks website for up-to-date opportunities to see and purchase Greg's work in 2010, including Arts Society King's Studio Tour May 1-2 and Schomberg Village Street Gallery September 18-19.

Greg serves on the boards of Arts Society King and York Region Arts Council. A self-taught artist, he earned his Master of Business Administration (Marketing - 1989) and Bachelor of Arts (Economics - 1986) degrees at York University, Toronto.
